Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: Scholar's Press | Effects on Adult Pathologies and Potential Treatment | Many individuals who have endured maltreatment during childhood and adolescence, continue to experience poor regulatory abilities in the areas of; self-awareness, emotionality, relationship statuses, and even employment histories. Subsequently,those persons exhibit detrimental health maladies and mental health afflictions at an amplified ratio later in life. The wider scope of the problem pertaining to individuals who suffer various abject domestic upbringings, renders the impacted person to a suspended state of adversarial situations throughout their lifespan. Struggling to maneuver without the skills to exert self-regulation, those persons eventually encounter elevated comorbidities. Thus, etching a panoramic and lasting demand for professional community involvement to address this panacea. The Hermeneutic analytic method was applied to the analysis of notable scientific studies to examine the problem in detail, in order to create more widespread awareness in professional and public realms. Results of this analysis shows that direct intervention utilizing salient screening, early and ongoing testing throughout our communities is required to impede this pandemic. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: english | 120 pp.
