Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO reviewed a site stabilization agreement between a labor union and organizations within the Department of Energys (DOE) Idaho National Engineering Laboratory (INEL), focusing on whether: (1) nonunion contractors had access to DOE Idaho Operations Office (DOE-ID) construction contracts; (2) the agreements wage rates were higher than typical rates; and (3) the requirements that nonunion contractors use union hiring halls resulted in double benefit payments. GAO found that: (1) bidding policies and procedures for DOE-ID construction contracts showed that any contractor could submit bids on INEL construction projects, but was required to sign the agreement if awarded a contract; (2) from October 1, 1986, through December 31, 1990, nonunion contractors successfully bid on 86 of the 286 DOE-ID contracts awarded, receiving 8 percent of the total value of the contracts; (3) 8 of 11 surveyed nonunion contractors would not bid on DOE work because they did not want to sign the agreement; (4) the composite wage rate under the agreement was 17 percent higher than the same rate under the Davis-Bacon Act, largely due to a...
