International Marine Publishing Co, United States, 1996. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Have you ever wondered about the origin of son of a gun, flotsam and jetsam, or hunky-dory ? You ll find the nautical derivation of these expressions and more than 250 others in this collection of nautical metaphors and colloquialisms. In addition, this book includes thought-provoking and entertaining examples of these words drawn from literature, movies, and song, and contains sections of legends of the sea and weather lore. Fascinating reading for sailors and language enthusiasts alike. Here s the scuttlebutt: Barge right in and swallow the anchor, and let s chew the fat and splice the main brace til we re three sheets to the wind. Listen, you son of a sea cook, I m tired of minding my P s and Q s. I tell you, I m all at sea, and this is the bitter end. Nothing I can do will keep this ship on an even keel. Hells bells! You think I didn t tell it to the old man? Delivered a broadside, I did, but he just called me a loose cannon. Maybe I caught him between wind and water. Listen, mate. You d better bootleg a bible aboard. We re sailing under false colors, and where we re headed it s cold enough to freeze the balls off a brass monkey. It s Davy Jones locker I m talking about. The crew was scraped from the bottom of the barrel. They don t know the ropes, and anyway they re deserting like rats from a sinking ship. It s time to fish or cut bait, mate, or there ll be the devil to pay. No use flogging a dead horse. Let s stay armed to the teeth and...
